ECHO

European Cultural Heritage Onstage

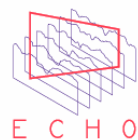

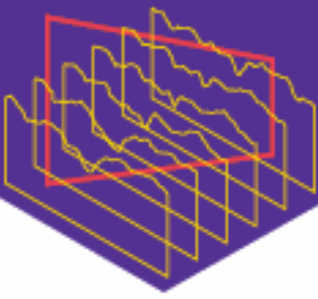

The ECHO project main purpose is to put the European cultural heritage on stage for all the people, from the old generations to the younger. That's the reason why ECHO's results and experiences must be shown in schools, so children and teenagers can witness what they can learn about history and humanity through art.

ECHO VISITS SCHOOLS

The ECHO project artists' Martina and Ivanka are visiting some schools and high schools with the purpose of sharing their experiences with young people. Professional school for textile and fashion design Varna town, Professional school of Applied Arts Smolyan town, The National High School of Plastic Arts and Design "Academician Dechko Uzunov" and Second English Language High School "Thomas Jefferson" of Sofia are some of the education centres that will be visited by the artists.

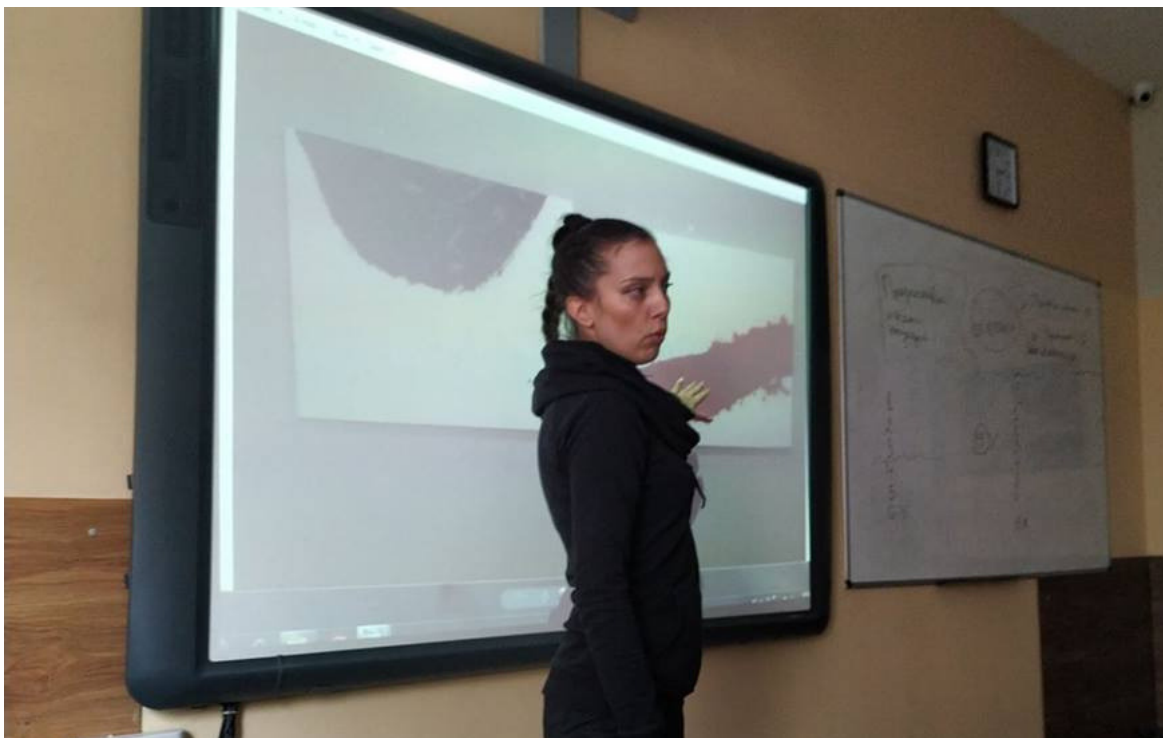

Some of them have already received the ECHO visit and as the interest of the kids on the project has been increased, more workshops have been programmed to let the youth enhance their knowledge more into cultural heritage.

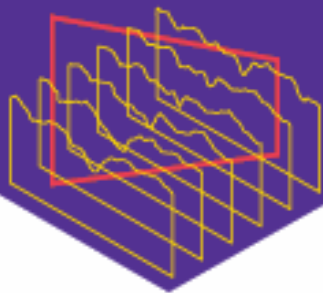

ECHO AT SCHOOLS

Martina and Ivanka didn't expect the young audience to be so focussed on the subject. That was a real challenge for them. They were really surprised that children could put all their attention to such a theoretical matter. However students were really interested in the topic because they had never learned history through someone else witness, neither through someone's art expression.

This new way of learning makes them discover a new world of opportunities, things to do in the future and knowledge to acquire. Therefore, Open Space Foundation will continue promoting these kind of workshops as a synergy between schools and organizations working for people to teach the youth new ways to learn, to be curious and discover their own possibilities and skills.
